Portugal this weekend. "I nearly stalled the engine on the start line and the whole circuit was unbelievably slippery but I drove a clean race. I couldn't see out of the side windows so it was more about survival than actual racing. I want to say a big, big thank you to Volkswagen Sweden and to my entire team who have done a fantastic job over the past few months. They have worked very hard to build this car which has been working well all weekend. It's the best possible start to the season." [?]

Second placed Solberg, who won last year's race in Portugal, added: "It is very important to have a good first race - consistency is as important as winning races in rallycross. I've not been feeling well this weekend and then I lost my gear lever in the final so it certainly wasn't easy but I'm happy with second. Johan [Kristoffersson] has done a very good job this weekend." [?]

Team Peugeot-Hansen got its 2015 season off to a promising start after teammates Timmy Hansen and Davy Jeanney finished third and fourth respectively. "The final was like driving on soap, there was no grip and then I lost my power steering "" my arms are so tired now," [?] explained 22-year-old Hansen.

"I'm really happy with the car, it's very quick but it's new so we need to make some small changes before our next race. Overall, it's been a great start to the year and I'm really happy that both myself and Davy got to the final." [?]

his Olsbergs MSE prepared Ford Fiesta. The Norwegian was leading overnight but was knocked out of podium contention after contact with

Sweden's PG Andersson during the final. Two-time DTM Champion and EKS team owner Mattias Ekstrom finished seventh overall in Portugal, while last year's World RX runner-up Topi Heikkinen was eighth after a consistent weekend of driving in the Marklund Motorsport prepared Polo.
